over the past three decades studies investigating heritage speaker hs linguistic competencies have shown time and again that despite being l1 or 2l1 native speakers of their home language s hs outcomes display variation across a wide spectrum of differences as compared to each other other types of bilinguals as well as their monolingual peers studies have traditionally used mostly behavioral methodologies rooted in adjacent established fields e g l1 acquisition adult l2 acquisition offering in addition to documenting and describing hs performance important insights for linguistic theory and challenges related to home minority language maintenance contact policy and more a birds eye view makes it clear that the methodologies one uses to tap into hss linguistic knowledge areas if not more are important than the phenomena under investigation especially in light of how their unique experiences with their heritage and other languages are present across a continuum

the focus of paradigms in word formation theory and applications is on the relevance of paradigms for linguistic description paradigmatic organization has traditionally been considered an inherent feature of inflectional morphology but research in the last decades clearly shows the existence of paradigms in word formation especially in affixal derivation often at the expense of other word formation processes this volume seeks to address the role that paradigms may play in the description of compounding conversion and participles this volume should be of interest to anyone specialized in the field of english morphology and word formation
